U. Of Louisville Plans To Hire Negro Advisor

LOUISVILLE, Ky.—(ANP)—When Louisville Municipal College closes down next month and its Negro students are integrated into the student body of the University of Louisville, a Negro faculty member will remain to become advisor to colored students.

This announcement was made last week by Eli H. Brown, III, chairman of the university board of trustees.

Students and faculty members of the closing Negro school will be asked to recommend a person for the post. Favored at this time is Dr. Charles H. Parrish, Jr., now chairman of Municipal's administrative committee and professor of sociology.

Dr. Parrish is one of four full professors at the colored school. All four have doctorate degrees.

Announcements in connection with the fate of other members of the defunct school's faculty also were made by Brown.

He said the university is now seeking Ford Foundation fellowships for the Negro faculty members who will accept them. Applications already have arrived at his office he said.

In the meantime the school's seven faculty members through attorneys are seeking employment with the university or $84,000 in severance pay. According to Dr. Parrish, none of them have found other jobs yet.

The board has done nothing about these teachers' requests. Originally, it voted to give the instructors 14 months notice and two months severance pay.

All these actions are result of the university's voting to discontinue the Louisville Municipal Negro College in the light of Kentucky's new state law allowing colleges in the state to admit colored students if they so desire.

Six Negro Cops Haled Before Jury In Racket Probe

CHICAGO — Six Negro policemen, all stationed at the Wabash Avenue station in the heart of Chicago's black belt, were summoned to appear before the county grand jury here Thursday, to answer questions about their possible connection with the numbers racket.

Of the six, only two were called to give testimony, the other four being dismissed with instructions to appear when called later. The two testifying were Almus Stewart, a policeman for 14 years, and James Foster, 45, a detective.

According to the state's attorney office, which launched an investigation netting the indictment of 11 policy bosses, a number of Wabash Avenue policemen are to be called in to testify as to their assets, liabilities, income and spending. This move is being made to ascertain if any officer were or are getting payoffs from policy operators.

Both Foster and Stewart signed waivers of immunity before testifying. They had been told that any policeman who refused to sign a waiver or answer questions about financial affairs would be fired.

Stewart said he had no real estate, but he did have a safe deposit box with a little money in it. Foster, on the other hand, said he has a small home on which he owes "quite a bit." He related he made the down payment on the home from a reward he received for capturing slayers of a milk driver. Both said they had not been receiving payoffs from policy barons.

was executive secretary and later president of the National Association of Colored Graduate Nurses, an organization which disbanded early this year because it had achieved its primary objective of integrating Negro nurses in the profession.

"Her work was characterized by wisdom, vision and courage and refusal to equivocate," the citation asserts. "Her energetic, forthright and far-sighted activities resulted in the integration of colored nurses, equalization of salaries and working conditions on all levels in this country. Upon completion of this work she was instrumental in dissolving the Association because it had completed the democratic aims to which it was dedicated. In these activities she had exemplified Negro womanhood at its selfless and insistent best."

The award will be presented to Mrs. Staupers on June 28 in Atlanta, during the 42nd annual convention of the NAACP. Mrs. Staupers will be the fourth woman to receive this award, established by the late Joel E. Spingarn in 1914. Other women medalists include the late Mary B. Govt. Reports All-Time High In Living Cost

WASHINGTON — The Government Wednesday reported a new all-time high cost of living index which authorizes a three cents an hour pay boost for one million CIO auto workers and paves the way for scrapping the 10 per cent wage increase formula.

The Labor Department announced that the index reached a new record on April 15 when it hit 184.6 per cent of the 1935-39 average.

There was only a slight rise of less than one tenth of one per cent from mid-March to mid-April, but the figure jumped 3.1 points from the Jan. 15 mark.

This authorizes the pay hike for the auto workers, whose contracts call for a one cent an hour rise for every point of increase in the index.

As a result, the wage stabilization board also is expected to revise the formula holding pay increases to 10 per cent and probably boost it to 12 per cent.
